GETTING BETTER TYPE OF ENGINE

Boyd Fire Fighting Apparatus Recently Purchased by Gettysburg Borough to Have Six instead of Four Cylinders.

A surprise is provided for the firemen, and others interested in Gettysburg's new motor driven engine, in the announcement that the Boyd apparatus recently purchased by council is to be a six cylinder, instead of a four cylinder affair. The specifications call for the latter type of engine but Chief Plank, in a conference with the Boyd management, has been able to arrange for the better motor. The financial end of the change has been cared for.

One of the objections to the Boyd apparatus, made by those who favored the purchase of another make, was the fact that the engine was noisy. The six cylinders will, in a large measure, overcome this. They will make the machine more powerful, more evenly running, and in every way more satisfactory. The change will add fifteen inches to the length of the hood which will improve the appearance of the car. Fully equipped, it will measure 21 feet, 6 inches, by 6 feet, 6 inches.

The car is to be painted red. Other towns have adopted white, blue, gray, and various colors but the general consensus of opinion is that red always has been and always will be the ideal color for fire apparatus of any sort.

Work on the construction of the car is going along satisfactorily and it is expected that delivery will be made here between June 15th and July 1st. Its arrival will be awaited with great eagerness by all concerned.

The fire company, at its meeting Wednesday evening, determined to hold the usual food sale the latter part of June or the early part of July. The following composed the committee, A. B. Plank, "Horace Smiley, Charles Koch, Luther McDonnell, and Edgar C. Tawney.

MANY MISFORTUNES

Woman Has Broken Ribs. In Several Other Accidents.

Mrs. W. A. Feiser, of New Oxford, has been confined to her home and bed as the result of an accident. Mrs. Feiser was engaged at house cleaning at her home, when in some manner she was thrown from a step ladder, and in her fall, her right side struck the edge of a wash bowl. Mrs. Feiser, after a short time, continued her work and felt little ill effect of the occurrence until during the night, when the pain became severe and a physician, upon examination, discovered that she had sustained a fracture of two ribs. A little over two years ago Mrs. Feiser suffered a broken leg by falling on an icy pavement, and previous to that had one of her knees badly injured by being thrown from a horse.

MAY 25 FOR THE ANNUAL CLEAN-UP

Burgess Eicholtz Selects that Date as Time for General Borough Renovation. Time to Get Rid of All Rubbish.

Thursday, May 25th, has been set by Burgess Eicholtz as Gettysburg's annual clean-up day. Preparations will be made to have the observance as popular this year as ever before and to put the town in good condition for the summer.

The day was placed late for several reasons but the principal one looks to the cleaning up of the town for Memorial Day so that it may be at its best on that occasion when the usual horde of visitors may be expected. The clean-up in other years has always required more than one day and this allows for the entire latter portion of the week for the purpose.

It is expected that the town council will lend its assistance in the manner of former years and will provide teams to haul away all rubbish placed in the alleys for disposal. No ashes will be removed and only cans and other rubbish placed in receptacles which can be quickly emptied will be cared for. Everything else must be disposed of by the citizens themselves. Matter which can be burned should not be placed outside for hauling but should be burned on the premises so as to relieve the highway force as much as possible.

Just now Street Commissioner Newman and his men are busy with curb work and street oiling. At a number of places where curbs have been laid there are water courses and gutters to be constructed, and the men have been handling this with all possible speed. The oil has been placed on several streets. The fourth square of Carlisle street was treated on Wednesday, Centre Square and the first block of West Middle street have been prepared for it.

Curbing is being built on Springs avenue. The oiling there will come a little later, it is expected.

Y. M. C. A. CARNIVAL

College Boys to Have Campus Affair for their Work.

The Eagles Mere Committee of the Y. M. C. A., at college, is busily engaged making preparations for the carnival next Saturday, May 13. The affair will be held on the campus all day and evening. Last year the college sent five men to represent it at the Eagles Mere Conference of the Y. M. C. A. The purpose of the carnival is to raise funds to pay one half of the expenses of the local delegates this year. It is the desire to send ten men to represent them at the conference this year, men who will return next year with a greatly enlarged vision of life and whose influence will be a means of help to others. The college band will render a free concert on the campus at eight o'clock to which all are invited.

IN BATTLE CRY OF WAR PICTURES

Adams County Mountain Land Selected for Thrilling Moments of New Picture. Companion to Battle Cry of Peace.

It was to furnish several scenes in a big feature film, "The Battle Cry of War", that the Forestry Academy students and a company of state militia were assembled at Caledonia this week. It will be a companion picture to "The Battle Cry of Peace" which was shown here about a month ago.

About a half hour was spent in rehearsal before the actual taking of the picture was started. When all was ready the soldiers were lined along a worm fence, at the edge of the timber land. Each man had a match and at a signal each man set fire to some straw in front of him. The result was that in a few minutes there was a raging fire all along the line in front of the line of boys in khaki. There was a stiff gale blowing and this whirled the thick smoke in all directions, making a realistic scene. The Academy boys were on the other side of the fire, seeing to it that it did not get out of bounds. After a number of feet of film had been taken the fire was put out by the students using their little but effective fire rakes.

The idea of this scene, as it will be used in the picture, is to show United States soldiers attacking the enemy in a woods, and in order to rout them the American soldiers set fire to the woods. The Vitagraph men stated that the real forest fire and smoke would make a dandy picture.

The soldiers were then sent to the top of the hill and they charged down the hill at double-quick as the cameras clicked. This charge scene will also be used in the big picture, which will not be released for some time, but which will have added interest here because it was taken so near to Gettysburg.

The soldiers were not paid anything by the State for their work, but everybody present enjoyed the novel experience.

GAVE RECEPTION

Present and Prospective Ministerial Students the Guests.

Wednesday evening the Seminary faculty and student body gave a reception to the prospective ministerial students of college and the preparatory department. About ninety men assembled in the refectory to enjoy whatever the evening had in store for them. There were short addresses by Dr. J. A. Singmaster, Dr. J. A. Clutz, Dr. A. R. Wentz, Dr. A. E. Wagner, Rev. C. S. Bauslin, secretary of the Board of Education of the General Synod, and Rev. C. C. Rasmussen of Newville. Music by the Seminary boys was a pleasant feature of the evening. The Seminary quartette rendered two vocal selections and the double quartette rendered the instrumental music. The latter played on an octave of pipes taken from the old pipe-organ. Charles Baker was director. Following this came the refreshments which consisted of ice cream, angel-food, and coffee. Dr. Luther Kuhlman closed the social evening with a short prayer.

BOY KILLED BY QUARRY'S BLAST

Flying Stone Strikes One Lad and Death Results in Short Time. Another Has Leg Broken in the Same Accident.

An accident occurred at Centerville, Cumberland county, Wednesday afternoon which cost the life of one boy and badly injured another.

Along the road leading from Centerville to Longsdorf Station several hundred feet from the state highway, is a quarry where the highway department is blasting stone for road construction. Shortly after one o'clock Wednesday afternoon an extra heavy blast was put off.

On the state road at the time about 1000 feet from the quarry, were two boys, aged probably 14, who were going along the road driving a horse hitched to a sled loaded with a plow. They intended to do some plowing on a nearby farm. The stone fell all around them. One, Benjamin Rice, was struck with stone and injured so badly that he died in a short time. The other, Robert Eckenrode, was on the sled. He was not struck by the stones but the horse took fright and turning around threw him off and ran over him. His leg was broken in two places.

Young Rice is the son of David Rice, residing on the Woods farm at Centerville where the family moved this spring. Eckenrode resides at Hockersville. The blast was so severe that it knocked in the door and window at Shenk's store.

Mr. McCoy, of Carlisle, is said to be in charge of the work at the quarry.

One explanation of the extra heavy shower of stone is that it took the wrong course, following the seams in the rock, throwing out pieces where not expected.

BRICKS DEFECTIVE

Lime Gets into Shale and Damages Plant Output.

W. H. Carbaugh, proprietor of the Carbaugh brick manufacturing plant, at Berlin Junction, is the loser of about 200,000 brick. In taking the shale, from which the brick are manufactured, from the quarry, the men struck an old lime kiln, and there were many limestone spalls connected with the material. These were passed into the brick through the usual process. In burning the brick the limestone portion was also converted into lime. Some of the brick were already delivered to customers, when it was discovered that when these bricks become damp or wet, the lime contained in them slaked and the brick crumbled to pieces. It is quite a loss to Mr. Carbaugh, as the entire lot is considerably damaged.

BIG INCREASE IN INCOME TAX

Committee Plans to Raise Funds to Meet Deficit.

MAY ALSO TAX IMPORTS.

Married Men Earning Less Than $4,000 and Single Men Earning Less Than $3,000 Will Not Have to Pay, However—New Inheritance Tax Expected to Produce Income of $50,000,000.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, May 11.—[Special.]—The ways and means committee, which has been considering the manner in which it shall raise revenue to meet the big expenditures for military preparedness and the appropriations that have been authorized by congress for other purposes, has evolved a plan for raising $250,000,000. It is proposed to raise $150,000,000 by increases of the income tax.

The levy will not go below the present limits of $4,000 for married men and $3,000 for single men, but it will be 2 per cent on those amounts and upward with rapid increases until there is a levy of 15 per cent on incomes of $250,000 a year. An inheritance tax, which will raise $50,000,000, and taxes on war munitions to the amount of $50,000,000 more will make up the total of $250,000,000.

Duties on Imports.

There is quite a strong sentiment among the Democratic members of the ways and means committee for an increased tax on foreign imports. If it were not for the fear of reopening the entire subject of tariff revision it is likely that the present rates of the Underwood-Simmons law would be increased materially upon a number of imported articles. In spite of the war in Europe there has been a great amount of foreign goods shipped into this country. As Germany and Austria have been barred, Great Britain has been the beneficiary of these increased imports, and the United States has helped England by buying her products.

Long Distance Forecasts.

Willis L. Moore, who was the stormy petrel of his brand of weather during the time he was chief of the weather bureau, is not satisfied to remain quiet in private life, and he had a hot controversy with the present chief of the weather bureau as to the value of long distance forecasts. Moore thinks he can do as good work two weeks ahead as the bureau at the present time does in predicting two days ahead. The weather scientists have really got quite stirred up over the subject.

Civil Service Complaints.

Every time a bill is passed providing for additional employees of the federal government the question is raised by the Republicans concerning the method of appointing these employees. The Democratic legislation generally has omitted from the operation of the civil service law all of the employees who have been provided. They come right back at the Republicans who make the complaint by saying that for years the departments have been filled with Republicans and it is now simply fair that the Democrats be given a chance.

Friend of the Farmers.

Uncle Joe Cannon took occasion to tell the house during the consideration of the agricultural bill that no one cared about being arrayed in opposition to the farmers. "But I want to say to you," he added, "that the farmers do not need any guardian. We have had trust busting; we have had all kinds of friendship and care extended to the farmer. But if you think the farmers are a set of idiots and ignoramuses you are badly mistaken. They are amply able to take care of themselves."

What Did Longworth Mean?

During a recent debate Representative Longworth read part of an article from a paper which said that Gifford Pinchot maintained in Washington "the most formidable and best organized lobby in history."

The man to whom Longworth addressed the query as to whether it was true could not answer, but it was rather surprising that this question should come from the son-in-law of the man who made Pinchot famous.

Not Enough, but Will Stop.

Congressman Morrison of Indiana is not going to be a candidate for re-election. After eight years in the house, representing a district which is normally Republican, Morrison thinks it is about time for him to quit. He frankly says that he has not had enough, but after distributing all the patronage in his district he thinks it is doubtful whether he could be elected.

They Want Reciprocity.

During the discussion of the good roads bill several senators expressed the desire to have reciprocity in the matter of licenses. They claim that the states have a general rule by which a license in one state is good in another. But that is not the case with the states that surround the District of Columbia. Both Maryland and Virginia make every District of Columbia automobile the full extent of the license fee, and the people of the capital do not like it.

Good Rule.

Never wait for a thing to turn up. Go and turn it up yourself. It takes less time and it is surer to be done.

BISHOP LAWRENCE.

President of Episcopal Church
Pension Fund, Who Is Meeting Success.

RAISING $5,000,000 FUND TO PENSION AGED MINISTERS

Would Retire From Active Work Those Sixty-eight and Over.

Bishop William Lawrence of Massachusetts, president of the church pension fund, announces that $2,000,000 has now been pledged toward the fund of $5,000,000 which is being raised to constitute a reserve fund for the plan to pension the clergy of the Protestant Episcopal church.

The campaign has aroused keen interest among the churches from coast to coast, and in a remarkably short time, a period of two months, this sum has been pledged. The hearty co-operation of the committees in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and other centers has been a source of much satisfaction to Bishop Lawrence and those actively associated in the work.

The campaign is being conducted in all the dioceses of the Episcopal church under the guidance of a national committee, with offices in New York. The campaign will continue until March 1, 1917, on which date it is expected that the system for pensioning the clergy will become effective.

The plan provides that at the age of sixty-eight every clergyman in the church shall be eligible for retirement upon a minimum life annuity of $800. The full amount paid to each clergyman is expected to equal 14 per cent of his average annual salary multiplied by the number of years he has received a salary. No annuity will total more than 50 per cent of the average annual salary.

Some 5,800 clergymen will be affected by the operation of the plan. At the present time there are 711 ministers in the church over sixty-eight years of age and eligible to retire from active service as soon as the pension fund becomes effective.

SCHOOL CHILDREN OFFERED BIG PRIZES FOR ART WORK

Best Electric Poster Design Will Get
Cash Award of $1,000.

A total of $2,200 in cash prizes is now offered to artists, students of art and the school children of the United States. The contest which is now under way is intended to stimulate commercial art effort in the higher schools and is an illustration of how big industry seeks to encourage practical vocational education in the higher schools.

These liberal prizes are offered by the Society For Electrical Development, New York. Each artist is eligible for the grand prize of $1,000, the second prize of $500 and the third or public choice prize of $300. The committee provides an additional $200, which will be divided into five prizes exclusively for school art. The future Sargents and Pennells of the strictly art schools will receive another $200 in awards. The competition closes June 1.

Dr. James P. Haney, director of art of New York high schools, is one of the judges. His presence on the jury will lend much encouragement to the school artists. The judges are all widely recognized art critics and include John Quincy Adams, secretary of the New York municipal art commission, and Arthur F. Wiener, president international art service.

The grand prize design will be reproduced more than 200,000,000 times in every form of advertising matter in connection with the country wide electrical celebration this fall. The purpose of this event is to focus attention on the stability of America's $1,000,000,000 electrical industry and through parades, pageantry, shows and illuminations to demonstrate the industry's capacity to organize quickly in times of stress into a potent arm of the country's defenses.

An interesting prospect for the younger artist is the arrangement to exhibit in the larger cities both the posters done by the country's foremost artists and the pupils' designs.

GLASS OF HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST A SPLENDID HABIT

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.

CHAPTER VIII.

Evidence of Human Life.

AND yet there were indications that even human life itself was not far from us in those mysterious recesses. On the third day out we were aware of a singular deep throbbing in the air rhythmic and solemn, coming and going fitfully throughout the morning. The two boats were paddling within a few yards of each other when first we heard it, and our Indians remained motionless, as if they had been turned to bronze, listening intently with expressions of terror upon their faces.

"What is it?" I asked.

"Drums," said Lord John carelessly. "war drums. I have heard them before."

"Yes, sir, war drums," said Gomez, the half-breed. "Wild Indians, bravos not mumsos. They watch us every mile of the way. Kill us if they can."

"How can they watch us?" I asked, gazing into the dark, motionless void.

The half-breed shrugged his broad shoulders.

"The Indians know. They have their own way. They watch us. They talk the drum talk to each other. Kill us if they can."

All day the drums rumbled and whispered, while their menace reflected itself in the faces of our colored companions. Even the hardy, swartzen half-breed seemed cowed. I learned, however, that day, once for all, that both Summerlee and Challenger possessed that highest type of bravery, the bravery of the scientific mind. There was the spirit which upheld Darwin among the gauchos of the Argentine or Wallace among the head hunters of Malaya. It is decreed by a merciful nature that the human brain cannot think of two things simultaneously, so that if it be steeped in curiosity as to science it has no room for merely personal considerations. All day long that incessant and mysterious sound of two professors watched every bird upon the wing and every shrub upon the bank, with a sharp wordy contention, when the snarl of Summerlee came quick upon the deep growl of Challenger, but with no more sense of danger and no more reference to drum beating Indians than if they were seated together in the smoking room of the Royal society's club in St. James' street.

That night we moored our canoes with heavy stones for anchors in the center of the stream and made every preparation for a possible attack. Nothing came, however, and with the dawn we pushed upon our way, the drum beating dying out behind us. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon we came to a very steep rapid, more than a mile long—the very one in which Professor Challenger had suffered disaster upon his first journey. I confess that the sight of it consoled me, for it was really the first direct corroboration.

It Was Really the First Direct Corroboration, Slight as It Was.

slight as it was, of the truth of his story. The Indians carried first our canoe and then our stores through the brushwood, which is very thick at this point, while we four whites, our rifles on our shoulders, walked between them and any danger coming from the woods. Before evening we had successfully passed the rapids and made our way some ten miles above them, where we anchored for the night. At this point I reckoned that we had come not less than a hundred miles up the tributary from the main stream.

It was in the early forenoon of the next day that we made the great departure. Since dawn Professor Challenger had been acutely uneasy, continually scanning each bank of the river. Suddenly he gave an exclamation of satisfaction and pointed to a single tree which projected at a peculiar angle over the side of the stream.

"What do you make of that?" he asked.

"It is surely an Assai palm," said Summerlee.

"Exactly. It was an Assai palm which I took for my landmark. The secret opening is half a mile onward upon the other side of the river. There is no break in the trees. That is the wonder and the mystery of it. Then, where you see light green rushes in stead of dark green undergrowth, that is between the great cottonwoods, that is my private gate into the unknown. Push through and you will understand."

It was indeed a wonderful place. Having reached the spot marked by a line of light green rushes, we poled out two canoes through them for some hundreds of yards and eventually emerged into a placid and shallow stream, running clear and transparent over a sandy bottom. It may have been twenty yards across and was banked in on each side by most luxuriant vegetation. No one who had not observed that for a short distance reeds had taken the place of shrubs could possibly have guessed the existence of such a stream or dreamed of the fairland beyond.

For a fairland it was, most wonderful that the imagination of man could conceive. The thick vegetation met overhead, interlacing into a natural pergola, and through this tunnel of verdure in a golden twilight flowed the green, pellucid river, beautiful in itself, but marvelous from the strange flits thrown by the vivid light from above, filtered and tempered in its fall. Clear as crystal, motionless as a sheet of glass, green as the edge of an ice berg, it stretched in front of us under its leafy archway, every stroke of our paddles sending a thousand ripples across its shining surface. It was a fitting avenue to a land of wonders. All signs of the Indians had passed away, but animal life was more frequent, and the tameness of the creatures showed that they knew nothing of the hunter. Fuzzy little black velvet monkeys with snow white teeth and gleaming, mocking eyes chattered at us as we passed. With a dull, heavy splash an occasional cayman plunged in from the bank. Once a dark, clumsy tapir started at us from a gap in the bushes and then lumbered away through the forest. Once, too, the yellow, shaggy form of a great puma whisked amid the brushwood, and its green, baleful eyes glared at us over its tawny shoulder. Bird life was abundant, especially the wading birds, stork, heron and this gathering in little groups, blue, scarlet and white, upon every log which jutted from the bank, while beneath us the crystal water was alive with fish of every shape and color.

For three days we made our way up this tunnel of lazy green sunshine. On the longer stretches one could hardly tell as one looked ahead where the distant green water ended and the distant green archway began. The deep peace of this strange waterway was unbroken by any sign of man.

"No Indian here. Too much afraid. Curupuri," said Gomez.

"Curupuri is the spirit of the woods," Lord John explained. "It's a name for any kind of devil. The poor beggars think that there is something fearsome in this direction, and therefore they avoid it."

On the third day it became evident that our journey in the canoes could not last much longer, for the stream was rapidly growing more shallow. Twice in as many hours we stuck upon the bottom. Finally we pulled the boats up among the brushwood and spent the night on the bank of the river. In the morning Lord John and I made our way for a couple of miles through the forest, keeping parallel with the stream, but as it grew ever shallower we returned and reported, what Professor Challenger had already suspected, that we had reached the highest point to which the canoes could be brought. We drew them up, therefore, and concealed them among the bushes, blazing a tree with our axes so that we should find them again. Then we distributed the various burdens among us—guns, ammunition, food, a tent, blankets and the rest—and, shouldering our packages, we set forth upon the more laborious stage of our journey.

Advancing in single file along the bank of the stream, we soon found that it narrowed down to a mere brook, and finally that it lost itself in a great green morass of spongelike mosses, into which we sank up to our knees. The place was horribly haunted by clouds of mosquitoes and every form of flying pest, so we were glad to find solid ground again and to make a circuit among the trees, which enabled us to outflank this pestilent morass, which dripped like an organ in the distance, so loud was it with insect life.

On the ninth day after leaving the canoes, having done, as I reckon, about 120 miles, we began to emerge from the trees, which had grown smaller until they were mere shrubs. Their place was taken by an immense wilderness of bamboo, which grew so thickly that we could only penetrate it by cutting a pathway with the machetes and bill-hooks of the Indians. It took us a long day, traveling from 7 in the morning till 8 at night, with only two breaks of one hour each, to get through this obstacle. Anything more monotonous and wearying could not be imagined, for, even at the most open places, I could not see more than ten or twelve yards, while usually my vision was limited to the back of Lord John's cotton jacket in front of me and to the yellow wall within a foot of me on either side. From above came one thin knife edge of sunshine, and fifteen feet over our heads one saw the tops of the reeds swaying against the deep blue sky. I do not know what kind of creatures inhabit such a thicket, but several times we heard the plunging of large, heavy animals quite close to us. From their sounds Lord John judged them to be some form of wild cattle. Just as night fell we cleared the belt of bamboos and at once formed our camp, exhausted by the interminable day.

Early next morning we were again afoot and found that the character of the country had changed once again. Behind us was the wall of bamboo, as definite as if it marked the course of a river. In front was an open plain, sloping slightly upward and dotted with clumps of tree ferns, the whole curving before us until it ended in a long, white backed ridge. This we reached about midday, only to find a shallow valley beyond, rising once again into a gentle incline which led to a low, rounded sky line.

And now, my readers, if ever I have any, I have brought you up the broad river, and through the screen of rushes, and down the green tunnel, and up the long slope of palm trees, and through the bamboo brake, and across the plain of tree ferns. At last our destination lay in full sight of us. When we had crossed the second ridge we saw before us an irregular, palm studded plain and then the line of high red cliffs which I have seen in the picture. There it lies, even as I write, and there can be no question that it is the same. At the nearest point it is about seven miles from our present camp, and it curves away, stretching as far as I can see. Challenger struts about like a prize peacock, and Summerlee is silent, but still skeptical. Another day should bring some of our doubts to an end.

Meanwhile, as Jose, whose arm was pierced by a broken bamboo, insists upon returning, I send this letter back in his charge and only hope that it may eventually come to hand. I will write again as the occasion serves. I have enclosed with this a rough chart of our journey, which may have the effect of making the account rather easier to understand.

Ever tag along in the wake of a smoke-sputtering, gas-coughing car or truck that had you sputtering and coughing in turn? Yes, we all have. And more than once we could have been arrested for what we thought of the driver in the car ahead. With careful driving and proper lubrication, cars should not smoke—with the emphasis on "proper lubrication."

Atlantic Polarine is "proper lubrication" for eight out of ten cars. It is the famous year-round oil that is exactly right under all driving conditions.

In all alternative cases, one of the other three principal motor oils—Atlantic "Light," Atlantic "Medium" or Atlantic "Heavy"—is the one to use.

Here is a group of four motor oils produced by the oldest and largest manufacturers of lubricating oils in the entire world.

The group is a result of patient research and experimentation conducted in a manner that a plant of smaller size and equipment could not have attempted. Motor experts and oil specialists seriously recommend these oils as the correct lubricants for YOU.

In actual tests it has been demonstrated that a properly lubricated car will often yield as much as five more miles to the gallon of gasoline.

Ask your garageman which of these four oils is best suited to your particular car, then buy that oil—and use it.

Read up on this subject. We have published a handsome and comprehensive book about lubrication. It is free. Ask your garage for it. If they cannot supply you drop us a postal and the book will be sent you without charge.

GERMANS DRIVE NEARER VERDUN

Berlin Reports Successes at Hill 304.

MILLION MEN IN BATTLE

Paris Reports a Lull in Fighting, But German Report Claims Further Gains.

London, May 11.—Paris reports all quiet in the Verdun region, where the greatest battle in history is being waged, but Berlin reports continued successes about Hill 304.

According to the German view the Germans continue to advance in their effort to surround this important height.

Berlin estimates that more than a million men are engaged in the battle and states that the Germans are outnumbered—facing about 800,000 French troops.

Reports given out are still conflicting, the time and locality of the attack and counter attacks on the northwestern defenses of Verdun being too vague for British military critics to form an opinion as to the present condition and position of the opposing armies.

Berlin Reports Gains. Berlin, May 11.—German troops continuing their successes northwest of Verdun, have driven the French further back southwest of Hill 304, it was officially announced.

The Germans have extended their positions on the hill itself.

"In the Argonne the enemy, after blasting, attempted to enter our lines, but was repulsed," said the official statement. "Southwest of Hill 304 the enemy's advanced detachments were driven further back, and one enemy platoon was captured. The new German positions on Hill 304 were extended."

German fliers copiously bombarded factories at Dombasle and Roanne Tappe.

"On the east front a Russian attack south of Garbunovka on a small front was repulsed. The enemy suffered heavy losses. No events of special importance have occurred on the Balkan front."

More than a million men are now engaged on both sides in the renewal of heavy fighting around the fortress of Verdun, it was semi-officially stated.

"While it is generally considered that the attacking forces must be four times superior to the defending, the German troops really number less than one-half the French forces engaged, which are not less than 800,000," said the statement.

"These figures represent half of the entire force which France still has at her disposal for active fighting."

"The second German attack against Verdun is based on the crushing effect of heavy German artillery. The taking of small western fortresses at the beginning of the battle by heavy artillery was only a prelude to the artillery results being attained today. At any rate the French have been unable to compete with German artillery and ammunition."

"The enormous French losses are due partly to the effect of German artillery and partly to the tenacity of the French, who will not abandon their trenches."

CATCHES FALLING BOY

Driver Saves Child From Serious Injury as He Falls From Window.

Philadelphia, May 11.—Jiary Gregory, a driver for the Consolidated Dressed Beef company, saved Francis Rommel, two and a half years old, from being injured in a fall from a second story window at his home, 522 North Thirty-fifth street.

Gregory was delivering meat across the street when his attention was called to the child, who was hanging over the window ledge. Gregory ran to the pavement and caught the boy in his arms as he fell.

Francis' head touched the pavement, but his only injuries, according to physicians of the Presbyterian hospital, are slight lacerations.

20,000 Women to March for Defense

New York, May 11.—Demonstrating that they believe in preparedness and mean to have it, 145,000 persons will march from Washington square to Fifty-ninth street next Saturday in the greatest exposition of non-partisan feeling that New York, and, perhaps, the United States, has ever seen. There will be in line, from 9:30 in the morning to 11 o'clock at night, 115,000 men, 10,000 of the national guard and 20,000 women.

Open Lamp Caused Mine Explosion

Indiana, May 11.—That the eight men killed in a mine at Robinson, Indiana county, on March 30, met death because of an explosion of gas ignited by an open lamp carried by one of the men, was the verdict returned by Coroner H. B. Butterbaugh. Many prominent mining officials attended the inquest.

TROLLEY MEN SEE JITNEY MENACE

Serious Handicap to Service, Magnates Say.

Lancaster, Pa., May 11.—That the jitney is harassing the street railways in general was the consensus of opinion at the meeting of the Pennsylvania Street Railway association.

Addresses were made by delegates from Chester, Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, who described conditions in those cities as serious and urged that it is incumbent upon the public service commission to see that they are restricted to the extent that there is no violation of traffic laws or danger to pedestrians. The large investment in street railways, it was held, should be protected in preference to the jitney business of mushroom growth.

Jitneys, it was urged, should be placed on an equal basis with street railways as regards taxes and regulations. No action was taken, but a committee probably will be appointed to present the case before the public service commission.

President Thomas A. Wright, of Wilkes-Barre, believes the problem will solve itself in time. The exorbitant price of gasoline, he said, will drive the jitney out of business.

120,000 INJURED SINCE JAN. 1

Is Number of Accidents Covered by State Compensation. Philadelphia, May 11.—There have been 120,000 accidents to workers in the mines, industrial plants or those employed by public service corporations in Pennsylvania since the workmen's compensation act went into effect January 1.

Eight hundred and eighteen resulted fatally, 385 deaths being due to mine disasters, 290 to accidents in industrial work, and 143 victims being men employed by public service companies.

Of the entire number of cases reported to the state department of labor and industry, only 275 have resulted in contests before the workmen's compensation board, all the others being settled by the employers according to the terms of the new law.

Luzerne county heads the fatality list with ninety-nine men killed in mine disasters and four men in iron works. Allegheny county comes next with ninety men killed, all but a few while working in the steel mills. Philadelphia comes third, with sixty-eight, forty-five killed in industrial plants, the rest by trains or trolleys.

A Handsome Bird.

The cardinal—cardinals, as students prefer to call him—is a great favorite of many and is one of our most brilliant birds. He is very hardy, often staying in the north all winter.

Several marks by which a stranger may identify him are: A brilliant red color, unbroken by any lines or blotches, except a patch of black on the throat; the bill is large, strong and blunt; the head is decorated with a crest of which the bird is very proud. The eyes are jet black and very large. With a bold, defiant look. The female is a dull gray, with here and there faint hints of red. Her throat patch is smaller and her crest not so flaring.

Not a plain talcum powder, but a highly medicated preparation unequalled for nursing and sickroom use to heal and prevent chafing, itching, scalding, eczema, infants' scaldhead, prickly heat, rashes, hives, bed-sores, and irritation caused by eruptive diseases and bandages.

Used after bathing children it keeps the skin healthy and free from soreness.

That Old, Old Table.

It is impossible to know who was the author of the multiplication table, but it is known to have been in existence in the days of the builders of the ruined cities of Mesopotamia, whose records are now being patiently deciphered by archaeologists. Tablets are found which tell us of their system of education, banking, accounting, business correspondence, etc., and among others are multiplication tables. So the multiplication table is probably not less than 6,000 years old.—Christian Herald.

You may be brave enough to stand backache or headache or dizziness. But if, in addition, urination is disordered, look out! If you don't try to fix your sick kidneys, you may fall into the clutches of dangerous disease before you know it. But, if you live more carefully and help your kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, you can stop the pains you have and avoid future danger as well. Don't experiment—use the remedy Gettysburg people are publicly endorsing. Read this case:

Mrs. John L. Menchy, 46 Breckenridge St., Gettysburg, says: "Several times in the past I suffered from backache and dizzy headaches. My kidneys acted irregularly. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at The People's Drug Store, gave me such good benefit that I haven't found it necessary to use them in a long time."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

INEXPENSIVE LUNCHEONS.

CREAMED CODFISH WITH EGGS. Place two cupsful of shredded fish in pan, pour on cold water enough to cover and let come to a boil. Drain off and add a pint of milk, and when scalded stir in a quarter cupful of flour mixed to a smooth paste with a quarter cupful of milk, and add good sized pieces of butter and stir until boiling point is reached. Just before taking from stove add quickly a beaten egg and serve at once.

Fried Apples.—Select tart apples, core, but do not peel, slice in rings, and then fry in hot fat. When browned drain and sprinkle lightly with sugar and serve, with broiled ham for breakfast. There must be plenty of hog fat, otherwise the apples will be greasy, as it is a well known fact that things fried in a little grease absorb it, while fried in plenty of grease little is taken up.

Baked Cheese.—Cut stale bread in dice sized pieces to the amount of a cupful. Throw them into a pan containing three tablespoonsful of hot butter and fry until crisp. Set aside to cool slightly. Cut half a pound of rich cheese in small pieces and put them into a buttered pie plate, sprinkling them lightly with salt and paprika. Beat two eggs to a foam, add a cupful of rich milk in which has been dissolved a "pea" of baking soda. Sprinkle the bread dice over the cheese, pour over all the milk and egg mixture. Bake until firm and serve immediately.

Tamale Pie.—Materials: A pound of hamburger steak, a pound of lean pork, meat, an onion, a can of tomatoes, chili powder, cayenne pepper, ripe olives, cornmeal, salt.

Directions: Mince or put through meat chopper the steak, pork and onion. Add tomatoes and seasoning. Cook half an hour. Make a cornmeal mush, adding a little chili powder to it. Place in the casserole a layer of meat sprinkle with small ripe olives, then cover with a layer of mush; repeat, having mush on top. Bake half an hour and serve with tomato sauce. If the meat mixture is not moist enough add water in sufficient quantities.

THE WORD "LOVE."

In the Orient It Means to Like or Is Used to Express Good Will.

The word "love" has been more highly specialized in the west than in the east. In its proper English use it means only that ardent, amorous feeling which cannot be created by will and design. In the west the word "love" has been relieved of the function of expressing the less ardent desires, such as the terms "to like," "to adore" and good will toward, and "to be well disposed toward" simply.

Not so in the east. The word "like," meaning "to be favorably inclined toward," is not found either in the Bible or in the Arabic tongue. In the English version of the Bible it is used in two places, but the translation is incorrect. In the twenty-fifth chapter of Deuteronomy and the seventh verse, "If the man like not to take his brother's wife," should be rendered "If the man 'consent' not," and in the fourth chapter of Amos, the fifth verse, "For this liketh you, O ye children of Israel," is in the original, "For this ye 'loved.' O ye children of Israel."

So to us orientals the only word which can express any cordial inclination of approval is "love." One loves his wife and children and loves grapes and figs and meat, if he likes these things. An employer says to an employee, "If you 'love' to work for me according to this agreement you can."

It is nothing uncommon for one to say to a casual acquaintance whom he likes, "I must say, sahbi (friend), that I love you!" I know of no equivalent in the Arabic for the phrase, "I am interested in you." "Love" and "hate" are the usual terms by which to express approval and disapproval, as well as real love and hatred.

From all this it may be seen that when the Great Oriental Teacher said to his countrymen, who considered all other clans than their own as their enemies, "Love your enemies," he did not mean that they should be enamored of them, but that they should have good will toward them. We cannot love by will and design, but we certainly can will to be well disposed even toward those who, we believe, have ill will toward us.—Abraham M. Rihbony in Atlantic Monthly.

The Kingdom. The kingdom of heaven is at hand in your consciousness. Why do you not reveal it? Why do you let the beggarly things of intellect hide away this pearl of great price within you? Are these fleeting things of sense, that are yours today and someone else's tomorrow, next month, or next year, of more value than possession everlasting? What are you striving for, anyway?—Unity.

PULP FOR PAPER.

It is Now Mainly Obtained From Wood and Vegetable Fibers.

Paper derives its name from the fact that it was originally made by the Egyptians from papyrus, a rushlike plant formerly common in Egypt along the Nile. Today paper is largely made from vegetable fibers and cellulose.

When it was found that the fibers of the cotton and flax plants were best adapted for making paper and the uses of paper were few the ragman did a flourishing business in buying old rags to keep the paper manufacturers supplied with raw material. The rags were first allowed to rot to remove the substances incrusting the cellulose and were then beaten into a pulp to which water was added. The pulp was then placed in a sieve and drained and subjected to heavy pressure which united the fibers and produced paper. By the modern method the rags are boiled with caustic soda, which separates the cellulose fibers, and placed in a machine in which rollers set with knives tear the rags to pieces and mix them with water to make a pulp. This pulp is bleached with chloride of lime and mixed with alum and a kind of soap to give a smooth surface.

The way man's discoveries operate to supply his needs in the progress of civilization is notably illustrated in the production of paper. Under the old method the big supply required today for newspapers and other uses could not have been produced.

The discovery that pulp could be made from the trunks and limbs of trees came to the rescue. It was found that by boiling wood shavings in strong solutions of caustic soda in receptacles that would withstand very high pressure the wood fibers were separated and a very good quality of cellulose for paper manufacture produced. As a result of this discovery paper today is mostly made of wood. Boston Herald.

A LEAP YEAR PROPOSAL

By ELINOR MARSH

When I was a girl of twelve my mother made a will leaving me all her property and naming Nathan Griggs my guardian.

Mother died when I was sixteen years old, and by the terms of the will I was to have possession of my estate when I was eighteen. This left it in Nathan's hands two years after her death.

Now, the truth is, from the time I was fourteen I had a decided fancy for Nathan. I looked upon him as a big brother and in my day dreams of the future thought of him as something nearer. I early passed beyond boys of my own age, which I suppose came partly from the fact that my father having died when I was a baby and my mother being early accustomed to rely upon me for many things that are not usually left to children, I became older in experience than I was in years.

Be this as it may, by the time I became of age and my property was to be turned over to me I had made up my mind that I wanted Nathan too. As to taking care of my estate myself, I had sense enough to know that I was entirely incompetent.

I also had sufficient feminine instinct to discern that Nathan had a decided fancy for me. But the main reason why mother had made him my guardian and one of the reasons why I wanted him—his integrity—stood in the way of my having him. It was evident to me that he considered me a fiduciary trust. He was so sensitive to his honor that I believed he would consider it a crime for him to become possessed of my fortune even by marrying me.

What was I to do? I couldn't very well offer myself to him. Possibly if I had been nearer his age I might have found a way to propose to him without sacrificing too much of my maiden modesty, but when I was eighteen he was thirty-one. It might have been easier had I been sure that he wanted me. But how can a girl know that a man wants her till he asks her?

One day in looking over mother's papers I came upon a letter she had written to my aunt, her sister, that had been returned to me after mother's death. In it she said: "I have made a will in Luella's favor and have made Nathan Griggs executor and guardian. I have done this hoping that he will continue managing her estate as her husband. I have said nothing of this, however, to either of them, for in such cases the surest way to defeat a design is to try to bring it about. I rather rely on my observation that they fancy each other."

I spent a long while thinking out a plan by which to use this letter to overcome Nathan's scruples. Gathering some business letters that I found to and from mother and placing this letter I have mentioned among them, I sent them to Nathan with a note in which I suggested that they might be of importance to the estate and that it might be well for him to look them over carefully.

What did he do but return them to me, saying that he had read them all carefully and they were of no importance in a business way!

I was no nearer my object than before. Well, the day arrived when I was eighteen, and Nathan came to turn over my property to me. It had become evident to me that if I wished to break down his scruples I must throw argument to the winds and use feminine methods. He spread a lot of papers on a table, and we sat down side by side that he might instruct me. I was not thinking of the papers or the instructions; I was thinking of something far nearer my heart.

The more he explained the less I understood. I kept hitching my chair nearer to his till we could be no nearer. Then, pretending that the figures were so minute I had difficulty in seeing them, I leaned sideways till my shoulder touched Nathan's. In this way I crowded him to the outer edge of his chair, and he could not move farther. My hair was done in a tumultuous fashion, and a loose strand grazed his cheek.

He went on explaining, but it did not take me long to see that his mind was no more on the papers than was mine. At last I succeeded in grazing his cheek with mine.

He broke down at this and went all to pieces. Putting his arms around me, he kissed me and said: "Luella, when you sent me those letters of your mother's you unintentionally included one that expressed a desire on her part that I should continue the care of your estate as your husband. I have loved you ever since you were a little girl and might have told you so before this had not your mother turned you and your fortune over to me in trust. It has not seemed honorable to me to—"

"Yes, I know all that," I interrupted, impatient at having to draw him out. "You have been very unjust and very stupid. You have wished to turn this estate over to me, knowing that I can't manage it. You should be ashamed of yourself."

"Well, sweetheart, I didn't intend that. But wasn't it fortunate that you happened to include that letter?"

"Yes, if I hadn't been careless I suppose I would have died an old maid for all you cared."

This proposal and acceptance are not in accord with the romance of such things, but it was leap year.

NOTABLES IN THE LIMELIGHT

W. M. Ingraham New Assistant Secretary of War.

William Moulton Ingraham of Portland, Me., who was recently appointed assistant secretary of war by President Wilson, is practically unknown in national politics. He succeeds Henry S. Breckenridge, who resigned when former Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison relinquished his position as head of the war department.

When Mr. Ingraham's name was first suggested for the position he was taking a vacation in Cuba. At the request of Secretary of War Biber he stopped in Washington on his return to this country. The impression he created, coupled with the ideas gained by a personal interview of his executive qualifications, convinced Secretary Baker and the president that Mr. Ingraham was the man for the place at this time.

A native of the Pine Tree State, the new assistant secretary of war was educated at Bowdoin college and later was graduated in the law from Harvard university. Returning to Maine, he began the practice of his profession, becoming probate judge of Cumberland county, in which office he continued for eight years. He also served as mayor of the city of Portland. Mr. Ingraham has long been prominent in the civic and political affairs of the city and is regarded by his fellow citizens as a man of vigorous and attractive personality and an able lawyer and executive. The new assistant secretary of war is about forty-five years of age.

Germany's Daring Aviator.

Among Germany's war heroes none is more popular in public esteem than Lieutenant Immelmann of the German military aerial corps. It is reported that Immelmann has brought down thirteen enemy aeroplanes. The aviator was recently described by a German correspondent as a modest, retiring soldier with large, quiet eyes. "Of the dangers of his air battles," says the correspondent, "he never speaks. His features brighten and his voice warms, however, when he speaks of the Kaiser's personally written letter. He was particularly happy that the Kaiser congratulated him on his twelfth victory at the very moment when his fighting unit was able to report to headquarters his thirteenth. The story goes that the Kaiser crossed out "twelfth" and wrote over it "thirteenth," remarking, "One can't write as fast as Immelmann shoots." He has received Germany's highest military decoration, the Order Pour le Merite.

Lieutenant Immelmann is a native of Saxony and was educated in the military academy at Dresden. While still in the cadet corps he showed great interest in the technical sciences and wanted to join the pioneer corps. He was sent, however, to the railroad engineering branch of the service. While in Berlin he started to study motor construction, in which he became an expert and returned to Dresden to perfect a motor which he had devised. When the war broke out he went to the front and was put at work on the fighting machines.

SAINTS OF ILLS AND TRADES

Holy Friendships Consolated Pious People in the Middle Ages.

The trustful and childlike piety of the middle ages believed that the citizens of heaven were interested in every phase of men's lives, and there was not a single trade, profession or occupation that did not boast a special patron, while certain diseases were thought to be cured and certain visitations ward off through the intercession and agency of particular saints.

Thus St. Andrew was the patron of fishermen, St. Isidore of husbandmen, St. Christopher of porters, St. Mark of lawyers, St. Cosmas and Damian of doctors, St. Joseph of carpenters, St. Crispin of shoemakers, St. Vitus of actors, St. Gregory of singers, St. Dismas (supposed name of the good thief) of criminals condemned to death, St. Apollonia was believed to cure toothache, St. Blaise sore throat, St. Clare and Lucy sore eyes, while St. Benedict preserved his clients from poison and St. Hubert from the bite of mad dogs.

"Men," says Montaigne, "lived in a tender and intimate familiarity with those forefathers whom God had evidently called to himself and whose sanctity the church has proclaimed. From the king and the pontiff to the poorest workman each had a special protector in heaven, and in the battles, dangers and sorrows of life these holy friendships exercised a most comforting and strengthening influence."—Irish World.
